Newegg has been one of the most reliable sources to purchase various electronics in the market. Generally, it also seems that Newegg has recently sold 300 fake or counterfeit Core i7-920 processors to consumers. Basically, these processors are well-disguised fakes, whereby the processor is rigged, to resemble the genuine Core i7s that you see in the market.

Of course, Newegg has issued letters by stating that it was an honest mistake committed by the company. Also, the person who discovered these counterfeit processors, namely, Mr. Waller, has already been issued a replacement for the processor he received. God knows, how many fake processors Newegg has sold into the market.
