Just when nay-sayers mentioned that the iPad is heading towards impending doom, it seems Barnes and Nobles has somewhat helped Apple to re-live their e-reader, simply by disclosing that they will be making plans to introduce their B&N eReader app which will be exclusively available for the Apple iPad.

Basically, B&N also mention that this particular application is entirely free, and it will be designed specifically for the iPad. On the other hand, this particular application will give you access to all the books, newspapers, and magazines which are available in Barnes and Noble s e-bookstore, which I think is really a fantastic idea and concept.

So do you feel like buying the iPad anytime soon?
